Whilst the Borough of Westminster may be more accustomed to sunny days in Hyde Park and cycling up The Mall these days, from January 1885 until June 1887 Humphrey's Hall hosted an exhibition of Japanese culture. Following the opening up of Japanese trade with Britain in the 1850s a craze for all things Japan swept the capital. The exhibition illustrated the manners and customs of Japan, as well as displays of Japanese music and Five o'clock tea in the Japanese tea-house. Our concoction provides a more modern take on some of Japan's finest liquid exports.

The Notting Hill Carnival we all know and love today is a celebration of Caribbean heritage, arts, culture, music, food and dancing. However, the very first incarnation took place in the building just across the road. Formally known as St Pancras Town Hall, in 1959 the Camden Town Hall hosted a cabaret style selection of calypso, steel bands dance troupe and a Caribbean Carnival Queen beauty contest. Inspired by the history of our neighbours, enjoy a blend of our homemade tropical cordial and some of the Caribbean's most infamous rums

In 1894 an operetta premiere is opening in New York describing the adventures of a Scottish Highland chieftain: 'Rob Roy'. A bartender in the Waldorf Astoria honours the premiere with a drink of the same name that night, and the rest is history. Between the far reaches of those Scottish Highlands and the glitz and glamour of Manhattan, lie 31,460 lochs. We've chosen to take another famous Scottish Highland export in Glenmorangie to honour this story. Join us as we depart to the home of this fine whisky, in the sleepy coastal town of Tain, Scotland.

Take a trip down to the HMNB Portsmouth, the base of the Royal Navy to pay homage to perhaps the Navy's greatest export. It was in the 19th century, with scurvy rife within the ranks of the British Navy that Admiral Sir Gimlette took to mixing lime juice with spirits to ward off the disease. We've visited the garden for basil and grape, and created a bold, herbal and sensory take on the doctor's historic 'medicine'.

St Pancras Afternoon Tea Syrup

Fever-Tree Tonic Water

Sometime around 1840, just a short 29 years before Sir Gilbert Scott started to build our iconic hotel, Anna Maria Russell – the 7th Duchess of Bedford, found herself often becoming despondent between lunch and dinner. She requested some tea, bread & butter and cake be brought to her room in the late afternoon – and with that one request, the ritual of Afternoon Tea was born. With the service being such an integral part of what we do here in The Hansom, we thought it only right to pay homage to the Duchess.

Produced in small batches using vacuum distillation and 100% Italian botanicals, Engine Organic Gin is the showpiece of this ensemble. We matched this with Cocchi di Torino and Campari to present this all-star Italian line-up. Founder of Engine Gin, Paolo Dalla Mora had such a passion for engines and motorsport he had to serve his unique gin in a motor oil can design; we therefore hope he would be pleased with our Ferrari Red oak-aged Negroni. Similar to the sparkling wine produced in Champagne, all the grapes used in Sherry must come from this wider Jerez setting. Such a wonderful liquid that is now sadly more accustomed to the back of grandparents liquor cabinets, we invite you to explore one of Jerez's finest, in this sweet rum-blend Old Fashioned-style tippie.

In 1873 we opened our doors as the Midland Grand Hotel. Just one year before Lillet brought their first French aperitif to market. Used by bartenders, both professional and home-grown, throughout the last 150 years Lillet Blanc has consistently added a certain je ne sais quoi to martinis the world over. Now some like theirs dry, some like theirs straight - on this occasion, we like our vesper martini dirty. But we promise you, that really doesn't mean its spoilt...

Istanbul has often been referred to as the gateway between Europe and Asia, and was a prominent trading spot for those exchanging spices along the East/West trade routes. To spice up this Mezcalita-Margarita blend, we’ve carefully created our own homemade spiced agave syrup (better than anything you’ll find in the shops!) using some of those very spices that have been sold in the city’s Spice Bazaar for centuries.
